SHOT WHILE PLAYING INDIAN

Boy Dies of Wound Received When Bullets
Revolver Went Off

The most serious of a number of small boys who had been playing Indian in a vacant lot in the Bronx, yesterday afternoon, was Walter Landmesser, 13 years old, of 376 Baldwin avenue, the proud possessor of a real revolver with real bullets, and Harry Joel, 13 years old, of 378 Baldwin avenue, who was tossed out from head to foot as a wild Indian.

The boys watched Landmesser plug a tin can with all the force of a marksmanship and then they noticed that something went wrong with the gun. Joel stopped his dance and walked within three or four feet of Landmesser to watch him make repairs. Suddenly the revolver went off and the bullet struck Joel in the breast.

The boy tottered for a moment and crumpled up in a heap on the ground. Landmesser, who was standing by, ran to the boy and tried to help him. He called for help and a crowd of boys gathered around the boy.

EXHIBIT OF OLD FURNITURE

THE T. R. CLARKE COLLECTION
IN THE AMERICAN GALLERIESSeveral Hundred Pieces of English
Work of the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Centuries, Unrestored, to Be Seen for a Week Prior to the Sale

Collectors of old English furniture as well as people merely looking always for a handsome piece of furniture of the period when the cabinetmakers of England were at their best and most distinctive work have an opportunity just now at the American Art Galleries to see the fruit of twenty years' assiduous search for the best of the most interesting pieces in this field of craftsmanship.

All of the galleries of the Madison Square series with the exception of one small room have been called into requisition to house this collection of seventeenth and eighteenth century furniture, which the Tiffany Studios are putting on the market at absolute unrestricted public sale, with a guarantee of the authenticity of every piece, signed by the vice president of the studios, E. B. Conover.

The collection is that made by Thomas B. Clarke, from whom the Tiffany people acquired it three years ago, when Luke Vincent Lockwood, who as an amateur had specialized in old furniture, prepared a catalogue of it, which has been adhered to in the sale catalogue.

The sale takes place on Thursday, Friday and Saturday afternoon of next week and the free exhibition opens to the public this evening.

The extraordinary number of pieces in one private collector's possession can be accounted for only on the supposition of the collector's forgetfulness, and as a matter of fact it is known that Mr. Clarke sold long ago that he was surprised himself when he found how many pieces he had accumulated in the two decades he devoted to this branch of collecting.

There are only two catalogue lots, but there must be 1,500 objects, so many sets of chairs are there. It is true that since the Tiffany Studios bought the collection a number of pieces have been purchased from it by museums and certain private collectors, but these have been mainly small objects or pieces that some collector wanted for a specific purpose.

Besides the Metropolitan Museum and the Boston Museum, these purchasers have included Mrs. C. P. Huntington, Mrs. A. M. Huntington, Mrs. H. P. Belmont, Dr. Denman W. Ross, Herbert E. Pratt, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Mrs. E. B. Conover, Mrs. F. C. Hay, Mrs. E. S. Webster, Richard B. Storrs, Mrs. Philip Lytle, and Mrs. G. G. Rayner. The collection as it stands today comprises objects and sets which are such as go to the furnishing of a house or to the formation of smaller collections of the earlier English work.

In their disposition for exhibition, regard seems to have been had for the seekers for individual pieces, and the single chairs of whatever form have been placed in the uppermost gallery, the sets appearing together, so that every member may be assured that the collection is not a hodgepodge of odd pieces, but a carefully selected group of the best of the earlier English work.

Among the chairs, simple or elaborate, the variety is great, and the charm according to the individual eye. One thing that is to be noted at a glance is that this furniture is not a hodgepodge of odd pieces, but a carefully selected group of the best of the earlier English work.

The result is that some pieces have a patina acquired through the years as agreeable in its own wooden way as the patina of a well-used leather. There are chairs of many forms, settles, tables of many kinds, mirrors and clocks and at least one and the objects are grouped in the periods when the English cabinet-makers, many of them Continental, who had been attracted by Britain's religious freedom, had been attracted by Britain's religious freedom, had been attracted by Britain's religious freedom.

There are a number of the long settles or window seats, without backs, which in the long form are not so common as the short ones. From the time of the announcement ten days ago that this exhibition and sale were taking place, the curiosity of the collectors of furniture has been manifested, and it is a safe guess, in looking for instance at such a set as No. 281 of arm chair and eleven side chairs, Chippendale of about 1770, that surprises wait some buyers who have seen Chippendale reproductions sold at low prices in the past.

With all its simplicity attracts the attention, as do the mahogany pillar and oak foot dining table No. 281, with a Chippendale pagoda top. But the exhibition is too large for much particularization.

TATE BOY CAUGHT.
Extradition Question Comes Up in Lorsch
Boy Shooting Case

Fifteen-year-old Robert Tate of 1023 Boston road, for whom the shooting of a boy in the Bronx police station has been searching since November 15, was found yesterday at the home of his aunt near Palisades Park, N. J., and locked up in the Bergen county jail at Hackensack.

The boy was wanted in connection with the shooting of Charles Lorsch, 13 years old, son of the caretaker at 1043 Boston road on November 15. Lorsch was shot in the side by some small boys who had been trespassing on the estate among whom he is said to have pointed out the Tate boy. Young Lorsch is at Lehigh Hospital and will probably recover.

The Bronx detectives were worried last night about the question of extraditing Robert, who is charged only with juvenile delinquency, which is not a felony in this State, but they see no reason in Jersey why he should not be extradited, as he is charged with assault and battery over there.

The boy denied that he was the one that shot Lorsch.

THE HOUSE OF GOVERNORS.

The William George Jordan's Views on Popular Election of Senators.The Governors and Governors-elect of the forty-six States are to meet at Frankfort, Ky., next Tuesday for a conference to last five days. "The House of Governors" this assemblage has come to be called.

The opening session of the conference will be held at the State Capitol at Frankfort, but on the following day, next Wednesday, the Governors will go by special train to Louisville, where there will be a four days session at the Hotel Seelbach.

According to the programme, Governor-elect Wilson of New Jersey will speak in the opening day before organization of the conference. It will be the topic of the Governors' Conference. In Wednesday the Governors are going to discuss their own job, just what powers they have and what they ought to have. Gov.-elect of Missouri will be among the speakers.

"Conservation Within the State" is Governor-elect Dick's subject on Thursday, when the main topic will be the topic of the State executives. On Friday the income tax amendment will come up, as well as direct primaries. Gov.-elect of New Jersey will be among the speakers.

On Saturday the popular election of United States Senators will be the subject of the day. The secretary of the conference, William George Jordan, with the approval of the committee of arrangements, has sent out a statement on this last topic which gives his views.

It seems to be shown from the evidence submitted herewith that the people want popular election of United States Senators, but that they can never secure it until they have first secured the right to work on the problem as separate States they have failed and must fail, but that they can succeed by concerted action through the conference.

A resolution of the House of the States is mandatory on Congress to call the constitutional convention to consider the framing of an amendment.

Mr. Jordan was formerly managing editor of the Ladies Home Journal and has been working on the subject of Self-Control. "The Majesty of Calmness," "The Power of Truth," "The House of Governors," and "The Crown of Indulgence." The House of Governors was his own idea.

HERCHULES IN MAID'S HOME.
Mrs. William S. May at One Visit Picked
Out $300 Worth of China, Etc.

Mrs. Rose Neumann, of 372 Seventh street, Brooklyn, was taken to the Yorkville police court yesterday charged with having in her possession property stolen from the apartments of William S. May, of 5 East Eighty-fourth street.

Mrs. Neumann, who is employed as a maid by Mrs. Anthony D. Nichols, who has apartments in the house where the Mays live. She gave up the job of maid last Monday.

Detective McCarthy of Police Headquarters has been working on complaints that thieves were taking property from 5 East Eighty-fourth street. Mrs. Nichols had lost $300 worth of old glass, china, silver, and other things.

The detective suspected the maid and called at her Brooklyn home and saw some of the stolen property. He took Mrs. May with him Wednesday night to Mrs. Neumann's home and there Mrs. May identified $300 worth of her missing goods.

In court yesterday Mr. May, who is a lawyer, would make no complaint against Mrs. Neumann. All he had wanted her to get his property back. The Magistrate instructed the detective to make a complaint of receiving stolen property against the woman and he would have to get her property back.

The woman said she bought the property from a man while she was in the employ of Mrs. Nichols and after she had heard of robberies in the house she was held in $1,000 bail for a hearing Saturday.

CONVICTS MAY DIG TUNNEL.
Movement on Foot to Utilize Them in Honing Railroad Tunnel

DENVER, Nov. 24. Convicts from the penitentiary at Canon City may perform all the labor not classed as skilled on the main range north tunnel through the main range north tunnel. The work will take perhaps four years and a large part of the 800 men in the prison will be utilized if a bill prepared by the law committee of the Chamber of Commerce becomes a State law.

Moffat has agreed to the arrangement, and some basis of compensation for the State will be arranged later. The important part of the deal of the men who must manipulate the power drills at the breast of the tunnel will be done by experts, but all of the manual labor not thus classified will fall to the convicts and they will be glad of the opportunity.

Charles D. Hart, former Justice of the Supreme Court of Colorado, brought about the agitation which will doubtless result in the utilization of the idle prisoners on the undertaking.

LOOK UP BOGUS CERTIFICATES

UNPLEASANT TIMES AHEAD FOR
JOSH GOLDBLOCK'S LAWYERS.Several Thousand Names on Record at Albany to Be Gone Over in the Hope
That Few Are the Names of Crooks
Who Bought a Scholastic Standing.

Pending the prosecution of Joshua Golubock, lately assistant to the registrar of the College of the City of New York, for selling bogus certificates of scholarship to the trustees of the college have asked the Education Department in Albany not to honor any certificate filed in the last three years, since Golubock, in his capacity as registrar, unless such a certificate has been filed in the handwriting of the registrar, Arvid D. Anderson, until the board of trustees has finished a thorough examination of the records.

To-day Mr. Anderson expects to go to Albany with the record books of the College of the City of New York and begin the task of going over the thousands of certificates filed there to find out which of those that have come from the City College are fraudulent. How long this will take or how many false certificates have been sent to Albany bearing the registrar's name is a matter of conjecture. It is understood that some twenty-five have already been found, although Edward M. Shepard, president of the board of trustees, said that not more than seven. Mr. Shepard said yesterday.

"Since Golubock became a clerk of the registrar a large number of certificates of scholarship have been filed by the college with the Education Department at Albany, perhaps several thousand. The board of trustees upon getting definite knowledge of some of the practices on the part of some one connected with the college have requested the Education Department not to honor any certificate which was not filed in the handwriting of the registrar of the college until the board can examine them."

The examination is now going on at Albany. We are convinced that fraud has been committed in five or six or seven cases, we hope not more, out of several thousand. Mr. Anderson, who is in great measure left the making out of the certificates to Golubock, and some of the papers purporting to bear Anderson's signature were never signed by him at all.

The holders of the bogus certificates may or may not have passed Regents' examinations for the law, medicine or dentistry, or other professions, and if they are practicing these professions they are likely to encounter unpleasant impediments, for the names are also on record.

Early yesterday afternoon Joshua Golubock's father set out from his home at 100 West 100th street, Brooklyn, to find his son. Last night somebody at his house reported that he hadn't come home, and that he probably wouldn't get back to Brooklyn at all last night.

DREXEL LOST IN THE AIR.
Starts to Fly Back to Point Breeze and Alights in Trenton.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 24.—With all Philadelphia stretching its neck to see him fly down the Schuylkill from Overland to Point Breeze to-day J. Armstrong Drexel arose at the former place, got dressed and landed in Trenton.

The homecoming trip from the point of land after his record-breaking altitude flight of Wednesday was to have been the big feature of the closing day of the aviation meet at Point Breeze.

Drexel arose at 3:20 o'clock. "See you at Point Breeze," said he as he left the ground, but he didn't.

He circled the field at an altitude of about 1,000 feet, began soaring and struck off in the right direction. Up in the air, however, he lost his bearings, and in making a turn went further around than he expected.

He had been told to turn to his left when he saw the river and that it would lead him to Point Breeze. He saw the river, but he turned to his right as directed. But it was the Delaware that appeared under him and his left turn carried him down the river. When he saw the river, he thought he was all right, but he missed the familiar city hall tower, and realizing that he was lost, he landed in Trenton.

It was too late to resume his trip when he learned his mistake, so he hunted up quarters for the monoplane, telephoned to Gramme-White and took a train back to the city.

Of the events on the field the most interesting was a flight made by Gramme-White, which began soaring and struck off in the right direction. Up in the air, however, he lost his bearings, and in making a turn went further around than he expected.
